

Character strengths

A symphony of white isn't the only way forward for a spacious home interior – this light-filled Landmark showhome gains interest from a feature wall in Resene Nero

A feature interior wall in a strong colour can draw attention to the scale of a room, add drama, and offer varied backgrounds for furniture, drapery and artworks.

This spacious Pukekohe showhome – the Waiata by Landmark Homes – has two living zones, one with a high stud due to its gabled roof form. This room opens via stacker doors onto a large wooden deck.

With so much natural light flooding into the pictured living, dining, kitchen, zone, the designer opted for a feature wall in Resene Nero. This inky black yet easy-on-the-eye colour complements the soft tones of Resene Double White Pointer introduced on the walls and skirtings. Resene Quarter Rice Cake is used on doors and architraves while Resene Eighth White Pointer sets off the lofty ceilings.

The introduction of Resene Nero in the primary living room also helps bring the outside in as this surface also features on the home's external Linea Weatherboard.

Surface selections are made easy with these colours as they were all chosen from the Resene Whites and Neutrals collection – a range where all the tones are designed to ideally complement each other.

For more details on the Resene finishes available, visit a Resene ColorShop, or freephone 0800 RESENE (737 363). Or go to the website: www.resene.co.nz

T For more online: search 48879 or Resene at Trendsideas.com

Above: This Landmark showhome, the Waiata, has exceptional indoor-outdoor flow. The feature wall in this light-filled room is finished in Resene Nero.