

Paint THE TOWN

If you want your walls to be as fashionable as your wardrobe, look no further than Resene.

The worlds of fashion and interiors are inextricably linked. Interior designers watch the catwalks for the inside track on the latest trends and fashion designers are turning their creative attentions to home decor. So when the colour experts at Resene set about creating their latest shades, they naturally looked to the catwalk, taking inspiration from fashion weeks across the globe. The result? A range of on-trend paint hues that will ensure your walls are truly in vogue.

BLUE

A cool, calming colour, blue is said to reduce stress and relax the mind. But did you know the different shades of blue can also inspire more meaningful communication, self expression, and even slow the metabolism? If that's not enough to convince you to incorporate blue into your interior style, its fashion credentials and polished, androgynous appeal will. Opt for paler blues with grey tones for your walls if your room is on the dark side and keep bursts of more intense blue for accessories like cushions and ornaments. In a light-filled room you can be bolder with your choices, opting for deep and decadent midnight hues for a contemporary, serene feel.

PINK

Pink is not a traditional wall colour in a country where neutrals rule the roost. However this warm, feminine shade makes a striking style statement when used in the home, evoking scenes from Sub-Saharan Africa and dreams of Arabian nights. It is also an undeniably fashionable colour, featuring heavily on the catwalks this season. Choose strong pinks with orange and magenta undertones and team with ethnic copper accessories to add an exotic flavour to your home, or combine softer pinks with white and gold pieces if your style is more French chic.

KHAKI

White reigned supreme for years and grey certainly had its fifteen minutes of fame, but now a new neutral is taking its turn in the spotlight. Inspired by the military fashion marching down the catwalks, khaki colours are having a moment, influencing both our wardrobes and interior style. The organic appeal of khaki shades make them the perfect complementary colours to the wood, concrete and metallic trends featuring in our homes right now. If using khaki as your canvas, accessorise with whites and dusty blues to soften the earthy base.
